President's Piece:

Networking is an art and a science. It's aesthetic and methodical. Many see it as a way to increase referrals. Still others see it as a way to increase their "social media collections." But let me propose that you see it as a leader in the community of senior care.

Why not network with the expressed intent on connecting people with other people and services? Totally and completely altruistically. Ask great questions. Use your mind as a virtual "matrixing" machine that creatively puts one product or service with another. When you go into networking situations with that mindset, an amazing thing happens; you get out of the way to make things happen. And surprisingly, you will be remembered for it. And that means that the next time someone needs something or a connection, they'll go to you. Now that's netWORKING! J
